Trace and copy the following letters.

Substitution tables

Substitution tables can be used to support talk and provide a scaffold which enables learners to speak or write in grammatically correct sentences. They are often used to provide an opportunity for independent work for learners who are New to English. However, they can also be used by pairs or groups where they can encourage learners to develop and extend speaking and listening skills within the context of a curriculum topic and provide an opportunity for meaningful communication. Think carefully about what the language function is that the learners should practise, e.g. describing, explaining, recounting, reporting, comparing.
